

LIVING IN A SMALL MAINE TOWN

Living in a small town in Maine is a special experience. Some people are city people, but I could never live in a city. . . this is why. One thing that I love about small towns in Maine is that they're right on the ocean. You can get all the joys of the Atlantic: fishing, boating, lobstering, clamming, swimming, or just walking along the ocean.

Also in a small town is nature. In the city, the most nature you get is pigeons. You also have fresh air in Maine small towns. You can also see deer, moose, turkey, etc. People also have farms and animals such as horses, cows, cats, and dogs roam the countryside freely.

Also in a small town is peace and quiet. No hustle and bustle like in big towns. The best part about small towns in Maine though, is the community. Friends, neighbors, and even strangers are kind and welcoming. Living in a small Maine town is a once in a lifetime experience, especially in Waldoboro!

Abigail Mae Vail
Age 12